Supplemental Box

(To be used when the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient)

Continuation of:

Box. V

But the cited documents only describe the general state of the prior art comprising an extract from a seed of Areca catechu for preventing the skin aging and an extract from Glycyrrhiza glabra as a hair tonic additives, but do not disclose anything about the combination of Arecha catechu and Glycyrrhiza glabra as an antive ingredient having an effect of promoting fibroblasts and keratinocytes proliferation and dual function for skin whitening and remedy of skin wrinkles.

Therefore, the subject-matter of claims 1-10 in the present application is considered to be novel over the above citations[PCT Article 33(2)].

3. Inventive Step

As disclosed in Table II to VIII of the present invention concerning the effect on Fibroblast proliferation and dual function for skin whitening and remedy for skin wrinkles, the combination of said ingredients shows a remarkably enhanced effect.

It seems to be caused from the specific combination of the ingredient, which can not be easily derived from the cited prior art documents.

Accordingly, claims 1-10 in the present applications are considered to satisfy the inventive step[PCT Article 33(3)].

4. Industrial Applicability

The subject matter of claims 1-10 meets the requirement of PCT Article 33(4).
